What is the world's beer bill? The Gambrinus, the organ of the Austrian brewing and hop-growers, answers this question every year by publishing a conspectus of the annual production of beer all over the civilized globe. The total quantity of beer brewed in 1890, as the Gambrinus informs us was 1,956,000,000 hectoliters, or 51,-834,000,000 gallons whereas in 1889 it was only 1,736,000,000. An interesting and valuable discovery has recently been made by John H. Woodbury, of 125 West 45d street, New York City. Arsenic and American Apples.

LONDON, January R. 1881. The Horticultural papers are remewing their attack on American apples, on the ground that they contain arsenic and the attacks are being generally espied in the daily press. The charge is that growers springle arsenic on their trees to percent the ravages of a most which east nothing but applies and pears. All the papers do not take the same side, and one points out the weakness of the charge, as arsenic would not be applied when the trees are in fruit. The editor of the Horticultural Times is the author of the Arsenic scare," as it is called here. Immenus quantities of American apples are sold in England and bring high prices, which perhaps capillans the reason for the attack.
